Lawfulness and Purposes of Personal Data Processing

The legal grounds for processing personal data are either fulfilment of an agreement concluded between a Stora Enso group company and the data subject or the legitimate interest of the data controller. Such legitimate interests consist in establishing, managing and developing Stora Enso's customer relationships (including concluding agreements with organisations that data subjects are representing), business functions and communications. In certain cases, Stora Enso has a legal requirement to collect certain information of its customers and their representatives. These situations relate e.g. to anti-money laundering and counter terrorism regulation, market abuse regulation and auditing. In some instances, Stora Enso may need to process personal data in order to ensure the security and functionality of the Stora Enso IT systems.

In limited cases (usually when required by local laws), Stora Enso may need to request consent for certain specific data collection or processing. Such consent can be at any time cancelled by the data subject by using technological means or contacting Stora Enso in accordance with section 12.

Providing certain personal data to Stora Enso is necessary in order for Stora Enso to be able to conclude an agreement with the data subject or the organisation data which the subject is representing. If the data subject refuses to give this personal data, Stora Enso may not be able to establish or continue the business relationship.

Maintaining a customer and sales register is necessary for Stora Enso to enable efficient and customer-oriented marketing, sales activities and delivery management as well as to establish and maintain good customer relationships. The customer and sales register is used also for more general communications purposes that do not directly relate to sales promotion.

Stora Enso may use customer related personal data also to improve customer experiences and to develop products and services by analysing the customer's interests. Data aggregated through customer communications and other customer interactions may be used to evaluate needs for customer satisfaction and sales interest related actions. This may include targeting of marketing, satisfaction surveys and as well as sales related communications.

Stora Enso may group customers into certain segments based on the data collected. This allows Stora Enso to better target services, feedback questionnaires, marketing and other forms of communication. For example, when visiting Stora Enso's website, depending on what type of cookies the data subject has allowed in his/her browser settings, Stora Enso may target specific content that is not automatically visible to some other users of the website. Please see our website privacy and cookie policy available at <http://www.storaenso.com/privacy> for further information about Stora Enso's use of cookies.

Customer categorization might partly be based on automated decision-making. However, Stora Enso never uses data subject's personal data for automated decision-making that could produce legal effects concerning the data subject or similarly significantly affect the data subject.

Segmentation takes place at a very general level and Stora Enso always ensures that it is based on substantive criteria that are not discriminatory. Stora Enso never uses the whole customer profile for segmentation.

Certain data processing activities may be outsourced to carefully selected third party service providers in which case such third-party processors operate on behalf of the data controller under a specific data processing agreement.

Stora Enso takes into account applicable local legislation when collecting personal data and ensures that personal data is always limited to information necessary for the said purposes as described in section 4. Thus, e.g. the data collected of a newsletter subscriber differs from the data collected of a long time representative of an established Stora Enso customer.
